

Contents

Introduction 1

1 What is the Writing Workshop? 3

The challenge of teaching writing 4

Writing is thinking 4

What we're doing isn't enough 5

Grammar worksheets 5

Journaling 6

Writing in other subject areas 7

Introducing ... the Writing Workshop 8

The definition of Writing Workshop 8

Children need time to write 8

The three parts of the Writing Workshop 10

The mini-lesson 11

Independent writing 11

Sharing time 11

Seven qualities of the Writing Workshop 11

Writing Workshop is routine 11

Writing Workshop is responsive 12

Writing Workshop is ongoing 13

Writing Workshop promotes independence 13

Writing Workshop is authentic 14

Writing Workshop is hard 15

Writing Workshop is rewarding 16

The teacher's role in the Writing Workshop 17

The teacher is a writer 17

The teacher is a model 17

The teacher is a coach 19

The teacher asks the right questions 19

The teacher manages 19

The teacher has high expectations 19

The teacher assesses and evaluates 20

Traditional writing instruction vs. The Writing Workshop 20

Troubleshooting 22

- When you can't find time for the Writing Workshop 22
- When you feel that you're not a very good writer 22
- When the teacher in the next grade doesn't do Writing Workshop 22
- When you can't handle the noise of the workshop 23
- When you don't like giving up control 23
- When you wonder if it can work for the homeschool 23
- When copywork makes more sense to you 24
- When you feel students shouldn't be allowed to spell incorrectly 24
- When you don't know what to teach in your mini-lessons 24

2 Units of Study 27

Curriculum in the Writing Workshop 28

Times have changed ... for the better! 31

- Units of study help you focus your teaching 31
- Units of study keep the momentum going 32
- Units of study help students become more thoughtful writers 32

Four types of units of study 32

- Launch unit 32
- Genre study 33
- Author study 33
- Other focused studies 33

How to choose your units of study 34

- Three questions to consider when choosing units of study 34
- Tips for determining your plan for the year 35

How to plan a unit of study 37

- Name the unit of study 37
- Gather and study a stack of mentor texts 37
- Determine the goals for your unit 39
- Plan your mini-lessons 40
- Anticipate challenges 42

Allow for flexibility 42

- Students may need more than one day to grasp a concept 42
- Students may already know the skill 43
- Students need the skill or strategy earlier than you'd planned 43
- You want to add something else 43

Should you purchase a unit of study? 43

Tips for choosing a unit to purchase 43

How to use a purchased unit 44

Troubleshooting 46

When students are losing interest in your genre study 46

When you're having trouble finding mentor texts for a unit 46

When you're not sure how a unit of study should look 46

3 Mini-Lessons 49

What is a mini-lesson? 51

Seven qualities of mini-lessons 51

Mini-lessons are teacher directed 51

Mini-lessons are short 50

Mini-lessons take place in a central meeting area 51

Mini-lessons boil down to 12 essential skills and strategies 52

Teachers choose mini-lessons based on students' current work 53

Mini-lessons fall into one of three categories 55

Mini-lessons keep the focus on the end goal 55

How to write an effective mini-lesson 56

Remember the format 57

Make a plan for how you'll present the lesson 57

Follow up 60

How to use a list of suggested mini-lessons 61

Don't be overwhelmed 61

Know that the age levels are a suggestion, not a rule 62

Choose mini-lessons from all three categories 62

Add to the list 62

Possible mini-lessons for grades K-8 64

Procedures 65

Craft lessons 65

Conventions 76

Troubleshooting 79

When your students are easily distracted during the mini-lessons 79

When the mini-lessons go over your students' heads 79

When students begin to write but get off task or stuck 79

When you create anchor charts, but they are promptly forgotten 80

4 Independent Writing 81

Give them time 82

Be consistent 82

Give them materials 83

The case against spiral notebooks 83

The writing folder 84

Paper 85

Writing utensils 86

Give them choice 87

Why teachers resort to writing prompts 87

Why students should find their own topics for writing 88

How to teach students to find their own writing topics 90

When we don't like our students' writing topics 92

Avoid this trap 93

Get them started 94

Remember your short term goals 94

Institute a "Status of the Class" 95

The "Quiet Ten" 95

Decide where students may write 95

Define an acceptable noise level 96

Let students know the range of activities 97

What should the teacher be doing when the students are writing? 97

How to bring writing time to a close 98

The Writing Process 98

Pre-writing 99

Pre-writing in grades K-2 100

Pre-writing in grades 3-8 100

Drafting 104

Write with purpose 104

Write for an audience 105

Consider the genre 105

What makes a good draft? 106

Drafting in grades K-2 106

Drafting in grades 3-8 107

Drafting guidelines for all students 108

Revising 108

- The difference between revising and editing 108
- Why students don't like to revise 109
- Helping students see revision differently 109
- How to encourage revision 109
- Revision mini-lessons 110

Editing 112

- Keeping the right balance 112
- How to teach editing 113
- How to use editing checklists with your students 114

Publishing 115

- Why publish? 115
- Ways to publish 116
- Publishing across the grades 117

Troubleshooting 117

- When students are finishing their pieces too quickly 117
- When students don't finish their pieces 118
- When students don't know what to write about 118
- When a child starts drafting and quickly runs out of things to say 119
- When a writer is unable to narrow the focus of a piece 119
- When a writer goes off on a tangent 120
- When writers resist revision 120
- When student editing is haphazard 120
- When children lack confidence as writers 121
- When children's stories are boring 121
- When students overuse the thesaurus 121
- When students overuse similes 121
- When students write run-on sentences 122
- When students need help organizing their writing 122
- When students rely on you for what to do next 122
- When capable students spend way too much time drawing 123
- When primary students can't stretch out words without you 123
- When students want you to spell words for them 123
- When a student says his hand hurts 123
- When students use sloppy spelling 124

5 Conferences 127

10 Things to remember about conferences 128

- A conference is a conversation 128
- We hold conferences where we are most comfortable 128
- The act of conferring communicates something important 129
- Respond first as a reader 130
- Remember your role 130
- Teach students their role 130
- Your goal is to improve the writer, not the writing 131
- Decide on one (and only one!) teaching point 132
- Keep your conferences short 133
- Enjoy yourself! 133

Other types of writing conferences 134

- Roaming conferences 134
- Small group conferences 134
- Editing conferences 135
- Public conferences 135
- Peer conferences 135

The structure of a one-on-one conference 135

- Research 135
- Compliment 137
- Decide 138
- Teach 140
- Link 140
- Record 141
- Be sure to follow up! 142

Conference supplies 142

Managing conferences 142

- Decide who will initiate conferences 143
- Do not let students interrupt conferences 143
- Make supplies easy to access 143

Peer Conferences 143

- Teach students how to have successful peer conferences 144
- Teach the structure of a peer conference 144
- How to manage peer conferences 144

Troubleshooting 145

- When you don't know what to say 145

When students don't know what to say 145
When a student's writing doesn't make sense 146
When you're not meeting with students as often as you'd like 147
When you're just not good at conferring 147

6 Sharing Time 149

Why we shouldn't skip sharing time 150

Sharing time is a teaching time 151
Writers need to talk about their work 151
Writers need to write for an audience 151
Sharing time is a time for assessment 152
Sharing time builds community 152
Sharing time brings closure 152

Different ways to share 152

Author's chair 152
Whole class share 153
Partner share 153
Small group share 154
Thumbs up / Thumbs down 154
Teacher's choice 154
Reflect and share 155
Exit slip 155

How to manage share time 155

Teach students how to share and respond 156

7 Mentor Texts 159

What are mentor texts? 160

Learn to read like a writer 161

Qualities of a good mentor text 162

Tips for using mentor texts 163

Choose a large stack for each unit 163
Have a set of "go to" mentor texts 163
Use the same texts over and over again 163
Enjoy a new book before the workshop 164
Make your mentor texts accessible to your students 164

How to use this list of mentor texts 164

Genre mentor texts 165

- ABC texts 166
- Biographies 167
- Counting books 168
- Editorials and commentary 169
- Essays 169
- Fairy tales 171
- Fantasy 171
- Feature articles 172
- Historical fiction 174
- How to writing 174
- Information books 175
- Letter writing 176
- Literary nonfiction 177
- Memoir 178
- Pattern books 180
- Personal narratives 180
- Persuasive letters & opinion writing 181
- Poetry 182
- Realistic fiction 183
- Reviews 184

Writer's craft mentor texts 185

- Alliteration 186
- Character development 186
- Dialogue 187
- Endings 187
- Figurative language 189
- Flashback 192
- Leads 192
- Onomatopoeia 194
- Point of view 195
- Print features & Print layout 196
- Punctuation 196
- Repetition or Refrain 197
- Sensory details (Description) 198
- Setting 199
- Small moments 200

Text features in nonfiction 201
Text structures in fiction 201
Verbs 203
Voice 204

8 Assessment & Evaluation 207

Assessment and evaluation are different 208

Assessment in the Writing Workshop 209

The point of assessment 209
Take a daily Status of the Class 209
Ask questions 209
Assess writing notebooks 210
Have your students do formal self-assessments 211
Talk about writing at different times in the day 214

How to grade student writing fairly 215

Be selective about what pieces you grade 215
Be clear about how you arrive at a grade 215
Value the process 216
Include thoughtful comments 216

How to determine report card grades 217

How to prepare students for standardized tests 217

Keep the proper perspective 217
Do your research 218
Teach writing prompts as a genre 218
Teach students to picture their audience 218
Teach students to follow the writing process 219
Encourage students to remember what they know 219

Troubleshooting 219

When a strong writer gets a lower grade than a struggling one 219
When a rubric feels impersonal 220

9 Management 221

Tips for managing Writing Workshop 222

Be prepared 222
Managing space 222
Managing supplies 224

Managing movement 225
Managing work 226
Managing talk 227
Teach and reteach 227

10 Writing Workshop through the Grades 229

Preschool and kindergarten 230

Early levels of spelling development 230
Spelling development is not the same as writing development 231
Writing at centers isn't enough 231
Are preschoolers and kindergartners really ready to write? 231
Your most important job 232
How to begin 233
What early childhood teachers need to remember 234
Goals to work toward 234
What about dictation? 235
Why invented spelling is important 237
Conferring tips 237
Sharing time 238

Grades 1-2 238

Journaling versus the Writing Workshop 238
Expect noise as children write 239
Believe that your students are doing big work 239
How to begin the year 240
Spelling development 240
When kids won't attempt difficult spellings 241
Shared writing 243
Revising 244
Editing 244
Publishing in the primary grades 244

Grades 3-4 245

Model, model, model 245
The writing notebook 245
Spelling in grades 3-4 246
Writer's craft 247
Publish for real audiences 248
Remember sharing time 248

Grades 5-8 248

How to make time for Writing Workshop 248

Have a safe writing environment 249

Writing notebooks 250

Publishing 251

Conferring tips 251

Sharing in the upper grades 251

Writing homework 252

Knowing what to teach 252

For further study 253

